RESEARCH & DESIGN BRIEF

Research Objective

To discover how the factors that influence the flexibility of work and the consequence of such work mode and work pattern can affect young workers.

Problem area

A lack of interpersonal relationships and social communication occurred due to the increased number of remote workers will lead the young workers to anxiety and can lead to damage to their personal health.

Poor work patterns have the possible outcomes of poor productiveness in the work and some psychological issues due to the pressure from being unable to finish their work on time.

Design Vision

Our goal is to provide young workers impacted by Covid, with better work-life balance by promoting more flexible working conditions.

After the significant changes made due to Covid-19, unexpected changes occurred in the daily working experiences of all the workers. As well as, the emergence of new technology such as remote working has blurred the boundaries between work and life balance. Therefore, this project will aim to change the working condition to create more flexible workspace for the young workers to allow them to have better work-life balance.
